

Martin Louis Duncan, Ph.D.
University of North Carolina-Wilmington
U.S.A.

Professor Duncan brings over 20 years experience in education and communications to his role with the Pluribus Technologies Incorporated. A proud Morehouse College alumnus, he also holds advanced degrees from the University of Durham, England (Grey College, M.A.) and the University of Puerto Rico-Río Piedras (Ph.D.). Prof. Duncan's skill set centered in journalism, technical writing, translation and interpretation is complemented by substantial work with online education technology and a wide spectrum of digital classroom aids. International experience throughout the Americas (Universidad Tecnológica de Panamá; Instituto Superior de Arte, Havana) England, Spain (Universidad Complutense de Madrid) and Turkey (Bosporus University, Marmara University), coupled with requisite multilingualism, has been ample preparation for his current responsibilities as the literary and linguistic conceptualist of Swarm Imaging. Pluribus Technologies employs Prof. Duncan in research, grant writing, technical writing and corporate communications. Recently returned to the U.S.A. after a decade of work as an educator, editor and consultant in Istanbul, Dr. Duncan is excited to reunite with childhood friends Tom Klemas and Paul Weil in this dynamic three-dimensional mapping project.

E-mail: duncanm@uncw.edu